A LIST OF SPELLING DIFFICULTIES IN 3876 COMMON WORDS[1]

INTRODUCTION

THIS monograph includes several types of pertinent data concerning each of 3,876 words commonly taught in spelling courses in American schools. The experimental and statistical work was conducted over a number of years, beginning in 1928. The steps in the work were as follows.

A list of "most commonly taught" words was first drawn up by determining the frequency with which the words appeared in twenty-five different widely used spelling textbooks, and state and large-city spelling lists. From this distribution the words appearing most frequently were selected. The limitation to 3,876 words was arbitrary. It should be noted that this is a list of words most frequently chosen by those who make up the textbooks and spelling lists, and it therefore doubtless includes the 3,876 words most frequently taught in American classrooms. The present author makes no claim that this is the best list of words to teach. It is, however, a list which spelling experts believe to be best. No claim is made, furthermore, that 3,876 words is the optimum number to teach. This number, however, is close to the average number contained in the lists and texts studied.

Many words in this list were placed at different grade levels in the various texts and state or city lists. The mean of these grade placements was computed for each word, and is entered in the list in this monograph. The author makes no claim that these mean grade placements are ideal. They indicate approximately the grade placement at which the words are most commonly introduced in American schools.

After the words were assembled, they were used in a multiple-choice test of word meaning. These exercises were made up, as far as was possible, with alternatives composed of words appearing lower in the Thorndike reading vocabulary[2] and the composite spelling list than the word which was being tested. A copy of the directions and of some of the exercises for Grade 4 follows.

[1] The data presented in this monograph were gathered over a period of years, with the assistance of Dr. Herbert A. Carroll, Dr. Leonard B. Wheat, and Dr. James E. Mendenhall. Dr. Carroll served as research assistant to the writer during one year and Dr. Wheat during another. Dr. Mendenhall voluntarily associated himself with the project during one year. Although the plan for this study was developed by the writer and the material was rounded up and published by him, the details of the investigations were supervised by Dr. Carroll and Dr. Wheat. In the final compiling of the data, the assistance of several workers assigned to the W. P. A. project number 6063-C, was enjoyed. Several dissertations, representing related studies and based upon substantially the same word list, have already been published as follows:

DIRECTIONS FOR WORD MEANINGS TEST

Below are some sentences that test how well you know what certain words mean.

Each sentence has a word with a line drawn under it near the beginning and four answers that have lines under them near the end, like this:

A book is something to: play with read sing tell about.

Which of the four answers near the end makes the best sense? The word read. Draw a circle around this best answer like this:

A book is something to: play with read* sing tell about.

Now, let us try another question before beginning the real test. Draw a circle around the ONE best answer.

Give is what is done by: Santa Claus candy him train.

You should have drawn a circle around the words Santa Claus because that is the best answer. Be sure you make a circle around Santa Claus.

Each of the sentences in the test can be completed by any one of the four answers that have lines under them at the end. But there is always one answer in each sentence that is better than the other three. Pick out from the four answers in each sentence the ONE that is the best and draw a circle around it, just as you did in the two above.

1. Afternoon is: after supper when it is cold washing when school lets out.
2. When we go ahead we go to the: east back front south.
3. America is a: state river country man.
4. To answer is to: ask call hurry say something back.
5. Ashes come from: chopping frying mining burning.
6. In an auto we: ride sit fly sleep.
7. We bake in the: frying pan lake oven kitchen.
8. A bank keeps our: pocketbooks flowers money books.
9. A barrel is: round good to eat made of glass small.
10. A bean is: a fruit what we eat a flower a bag.
11. Became means: came quickly came to be began beckoned.
12. A belt is: money a band bubbles part of a tree.
13. A bet is made: on a game in the woods in a house very hard.
14. When it is between it: is funny weighs much sinks has one on each side.
15. We blame somebody when: we meet them on the street there is a snowstorm it is not right we like a good act.
16. The blind man could not: eat hear see fish.
17. A body is part of: the air a person a sentence a pie.
18. A bone can: float tear break melt.
19. When we go to the bottom we go: away down up ahead.
20. A branch is part of a: house tree flower game.
21. At breakfast we: study sleep see pictures eat.
22. A bucket is used to: ride in carry water eat with make a horse run.
23. A buggy is used to: carry water ride in eat with make a horse run.

These exercises were made by advanced students under the direction of the writer and Dr. Leonard B. Wheat. Each was studied and rewritten until it was as good as a group of three or more of these persons could make it. The exercises were then given to pupils in the New York City area until a satisfactorily reliable and stable grade placement was obtained for each. In some cases, it was necessary to obtain two hundred or more records from each of six grades; in others, fewer grades and fewer cases were needed to stabilize the placement for the several percentages.

In the lists constituting the main body of this monograph, the grade positions at which 40%, 50%, 60%, 70%, 80%, and 90%, respectively, of the pupils knew the meaning of the words—or, more accurately, solved the multiple-choice exercise—are shown. For example, the word-meaning exercise for the first word, ability, was done correctly by 40 per cent of the pupils at a grade position of 4.7; 50 per cent at grade 5.2; 60 per cent at grade 5.7; 70 per cent at grade 6.4; 80 per cent at grade 7.5. For 90 per cent, the entry is +, which means that none of the groups of pupils tested, even the most advanced in grade 8, got this exercise right in 90 per cent of the cases. To get a group of which 90 per cent would solve the problem, in other words, one would have to go above grade 8. This was not done for this word. In a few cases more advanced pupils were secured; for example, see the word acceptance.

For a few very common or easy words, such as an, and, any, as, no word meaning tests were given for the reason that other evidence indicates that most children know and use them before they can write or spell them. For these words no entries are made in this part of the list.

After the results of considerable testing were obtained, the pupils' responses were studied for unusual features. In certain cases the group conducting the study decided that the exercise was defective in some respect, and new or revised exercises were made and applied to additional children. In all such cases the results of the original tests are given in the list, followed by those of the revised exercise, which is indicated by the letter R. The discrepancies in these cases indicate that a pupil's understanding of a word depends considerably upon the exercise. It should be noted, however, that these are the extreme cases—usually of word meanings which are difficult to test. The large majority of the word meanings are doubtless more accurately determined. In most cases, it is believed that the pupil who fails to solve the exercise would not know the word very well. It should be admitted, however, that a more recent study (unpublished) shows that pupils obtained higher meaning scores on certain types of usage tests than on the multiple-choice. From this it appears that children may understand the words in highly helpful or conventional context at somewhat lower levels than those shown in the lists in this monograph. Meanings vary from low to high degree; the records in the following lists are probably indications of moderate, rather than the lowest, degrees.

Characteristics of Spelling Errors

The most important part of the monograph is the evidence concerning the characteristics of errors in spelling each of the 3,876 words. To obtain these data the words were used in spelling tests in which the responses were made in writing. The words were pronounced, used in a sentence or two to define the meaning, pronounced again, and then written by the pupils. The subjects for the tests were pupils in various public schools in the metropolitan area, mainly from Manhattan and Brooklyn. Each word was usually given to a class one grade lower than the grade in which the word was formerly taught in the curriculum of this particular school. This policy was adopted in order to secure a larger number of misspellings than would have been forthcoming after the pupils had studied the word. That is to say, for most pupils misspellings are instances of failure to solve a spelling problem rather than failure to recall a practiced spelling. This, of course, will not be universally true. Many children write words, look them up in books and dictionaries, and study them before encountering them in the spelling program.

In the Spelling List beginning on page 11 the first column consists of the word correctly spelled, followed by one, two, or three figures in parentheses. It will be noted that certain letters in most words are in italics and that in some words two parts of the word are italicized, or that one part is italicized and another part appears in bold face letters.* The part of the word italicized or in bold face is the part in which the greatest number of errors are made. If the word has two parts italicized, or one part italicized and another part in bold face, it means that two parts are especially hard. The figure or figures in italics give the actual percentages. For example, in the first word, ability, the largest number of errors consist of failures on the second i, which is italicized. The figure in parentheses indicates that 61% of the misspellings of this word are failures on the i. In the second word, able, 91% of the errors are on the letters le, which are italicized. In the word abundance, the hard spots are the u and the second a, both of which are italicized. In 48% of the misspellings there is an error on the u and in 73% the error is on the second a. In the word absent, the two hard spots are the b and the s, the first of which, showing 38% errors, is italicized, and the second of which, showing 43% errors, is in bold face. The second hard spot is given in bold face to indicate that it is to be thought of as separate from the preceding letter b in italics, which is also a hard spot. In this word the b and the s are treated separately, or as representing two hard spots, for the reason that they fall into different syllables and are commonly treated as parts of two units within the word. In the word acquaintance, with three hard spots, the percentage of the total number of errors in each case is given. In certain cases, the hard spot is indicated by letters in parentheses above or beside a word. Thus, in appears, an (e) is placed above the space between the last two letters. This means that the hard spot is this space—the result of inserting an e. In the case of avoid, an (e) follows the word and means that the ending of the word, due to a tendency to add an e, is a hard spot.

The second column of the Spelling List gives the most common misspelling of the word, and the third column the per cent of the total errors which this particular misspelling represents. Thus, in the case of ability, the most common misspelling is abilaty. Of all the errors made on this word, 41.9% take exactly this form. This word is spelled abbility in 22.6% of the cases. That is to say, of all the misspellings of this word, 64.5% are one or the other of these two forms. The second word able shows only one common misspelling, namely abel, which accounts for 35.1% of the total misspellings. The third word, aboard, has no misspelling which appears clearly more frequently than others. This word is obviously spelled a great many different ways, although, as the first column shows, 59% of the errors reveal difficulties in oa.

* Bold face is used when the two parts come together, so that they may be easily distinguished.

The number of misspellings analyzed differs from word to word, but in no case is it less than 200. The median number of misspellings per word is slightly over 300, and for about a quarter of the words the number exceeds 400. It is believed that the number of misspellings, even at the minimum, is sufficient to give a fairly reliable result. For all the words, more than 1,200,000 misspellings were analyzed.

Suggested Uses of the Data

The uses to which the data in the monograph may be put are so obvious as scarcely to need comment. For example, under modern spelling methods the pupils are usually taught a technique which enables them to give special attention to any part of the word which offers them special difficulty. Studies based on photographic records of eye-movements made by Abernethy[3] and Gilbert[4] show that good spellers tend to discover and give special attention to the difficult parts of words far more than poor spellers do. The data in this monograph, indicating the most difficult parts of the word and giving the extent to which total errors are to be found in that particular part, may be used in helping the pupil center his attention where it is most needed. The list of the most common errors enables the teacher or a pupil to realize in advance what difficulties to guard against. The facts may also be used in various types of generalization activities by means of which a word may be associated with other words whose spelling has been mastered so as to give associations which will tend to evoke the proper response and block the most common error.

It should be pointed out that the data of the monograph can be misused as well as helpfully employed. For example, it would probably be a misuse of the data to ask pupils to study the incorrect forms before or shortly after they have studied the correct ones. Such a practice would probably give as much emphasis to the incorrect form as to the correct one and lead to an even greater percentage of error.

It should be noted that, although the data in this monograph were obtained from a large number of cases, they may, nevertheless, not present an entirely accurate picture of the facts that would be found in other localities. It is possible, for example, that the spelling errors are conditioned somewhat by the time and methods of teaching words, by the frequency with which the words are used in writing, and by the typical pronunciation of a given locality. Children habitually using the characteristic speech of Boston, or of Portland, Maine, or of New Orleans, or of Houston, Texas, may reveal somewhat different forms of misspelling. In this monograph no endeavor has been made to determine the extent to which the misspellings differ as the result of these and other factors. It should be realized, however, that the population of the schools in New York City is extremely diversified and that all forms of language background are represented. It is believed that the list gives a reasonably representative picture of misspellings, although it is not denied that children living in quite different localities or speaking quite different dialects might differ somewhat in their spelling from any representative list.

Importance of Aspects of Spelling Errors

A statistical tabulation of the characteristics of the words gives some idea of the importance of the several aspects of spelling errors presented in this monograph. For example, a tabulation shows that 3.8 per cent of the words had no outstanding hard spots. These words were erroneously spelled in so many ways that no part appeared to be clearly more difficult than others. Nearly three-quarters of the words (72.5 per cent) revealed one and only one definite hard spot; nearly one-quarter (23.4 per cent) had two outstanding hard spots; and a negligible number (0.3 per cent) had three hard spots. Substantially all words in the list (95.9 per cent) are characterized by having one or two hard spots.

Table I shows the percentage-frequency distribution of the hard spots found in the words. In this total were included all hard spots—the second and third as well as the first in those words which contained two or three. The table shows a fairly even distribution of hard spots in the range which covers from 40 to 99 per cent of all erroneous spellings of the words. In 4.6 per cent of the words the hard spot is wrong in 100 per cent of the misspellings. The third column in the table, which gives a cumulative sum of the percentages reading from the bottom of the table upward shows that a hard spot is misspelled in 90 per cent or more of all misspellings in nearly a quarter of the cases; and that the hard spot is misspelled in 70 per cent or more of all errors in more than half the instances—52.7 per cent to be exact. This table gives an impressive display of the general tendency of some one or two parts of a word (one in three-quarters of the cases) to be faultily spelled. The hard spots are wrong in half or more of the misspellings in approximately four out of five cases—78.2 per cent to be exact.

A tabulation was also made of the common misspellings. Of the 3,876 words in the list, 10.2 per cent had no common misspellings. That is to say, approximately one word out of ten was misspelled in so many different ways that no one form appeared appreciably more frequently than others. On the other hand, nine out of every ten words did reveal one or more common misspellings. About two words out of three (66.4 per cent) showed one common misspelling; 22.4 per cent showed two common misspellings; and 1 per cent showed three.

Table II shows a distribution of the percentages which the common misspellings represent of the total number of misspellings for the words. This table is based on all the percentages of the common misspellings listed in this monograph. That is to say, if two or three misspellings appear with sufficient frequency to be listed in the monograph, they are included in the table. Glancing at the table it will be observed that in 16 per cent of the cases, the common misspelling accounts for from 50 to 100 per cent of all misspellings of the word. In a quarter of the cases (26.8 per cent) the common misspellings account for 40 per cent or more of all misspellings; in nearly half of the cases (45.6 per cent) the common misspellings represent 30 per cent or more of all misspellings.

From these data it is clear that, although in a considerable proportion of the cases misspellings tend to be of one or two common types, it is much easier to define the part of the word in which the error occurs than to give the specific total misspelling. The data in the monograph, however, reveal in the case of each individual word the nature of the specific spelling difficulty. In many cases a single misspelling is so common as to suggest the importance of setting up instruction which will guard against the tendency to make this particular error. In other cases, the difficulty can be localized in a definite part of the word, even when no types of misspelling stand out very prominently. In the case of many words, there is a conspicuous type of misspelling and a strong tendency for difficulty to appear in one or two parts of the word. In these cases the instructor must use judgment in deciding upon the proper preventative measures to take. It should be noted also that there is only a small percentage of the words which reveal neither common types of misspelling nor a special locus of the difficulty. An interesting and significant feature of the study as a whole is that these words are relatively few.

THE LIST OF 3876 WORDS ALPHABETICALLY ARRANGED

KEY

Correct Spelling Column: If a word in this column has two parts italicized or one part italicized and another in bold face letters, it means that two parts are especially hard. Bold face letters are used when two hard parts come together, so they may be easily distinguished. Small letters in parentheses are inserted above or at the right of words to show common errors due to adding these letters. The italic figure or figures in parentheses at the right of words give the actual per cents of total errors which the mistakes on the hard spots constitute.

Common Misspellings: This includes the most common misspelling or misspellings of the word and the per cent of the total errors which the particular misspelling or misspellings represent.

Av. G. P. Column: This column gives the average of the grade placements of the word found in various texts and state and large-city courses of study in spelling.

Grade Level of Comprehension: The six columns of per cents included under this heading show the grade positions at which 40%, 50%, 60%, 70%, 80%, and 90%, respectively, of the pupils knew the meaning of the words according to the results of a multiple-choice test. When two sets of figures accompany a word, the one with an R was derived from the results of the revised meanings tests; the one without an R from the original test. A minus sign in these columns may be read "below grade 3.0"; a plus sign may be read "above grade 9.0."
